Zoo New England is the non-profit organization responsible for the operation of Franklin Park Zoo in Boston and Stone Zoo in Stoneham, Mass. Both Zoos are accredited by the Association of Zoos & Aquariums (AZA).

Zoo New England’s mission is to inspire people to protect and sustain the natural world for future generations by creating fun and engaging experiences that integrate wildlife and conservation programs, research, and education.

Zoo Supporters,

Fiscal year 2012 was a very exciting year for Zoo New England marked with many achievements and new opportunities. From exciting births including a kangaroo joey, white-cheeked gibbon, and a Grevy’s zebra, to engaging interactive experiences such Aussie Aviary, Butterfly Landing and the always memorable Masters of Flight: Birds of Prey show, there was so much to share.

Franklin Park Zoo celebrated a century of fun and adventure and people of all ages enjoyed the many celebrations in honor of the Zoo’s 100th birthday. As part of the centennial celebration, we presented the thrilling seasonal exhibit Zooorassic Park where visitors were immersed in a prehistoric journey through time filled with moving, roaring, life-like animatronic dinosaurs, including the imposing Tyrannosaurus rex.

As vibrant, essential contributors to our region’s cultural landscape, Franklin Park Zoo and Stone Zoo provide affordable, fun activities for families while simultaneously educating and inspiring wildlife conservationists and supporters. In FY12, more than 660,000 children, teens, adults, tourists, teachers and students visited the Zoos making FY12 a record-setting year. In fact, attendance increased 25 percent over FY11, strengthening our reputation as being a must-see destination.

Within our gates, classroom learning is brought to life and family memories are created. In FY12, we welcomed more than 47,000 students who visited our Zoos through school field trips. Their laughter and squeals of excitement were contagious as they streamed through our gates for a day of fun and learning. As the fiscal year drew to a close, we were anxiously preparing for the opening of our new, magnificent playground at Franklin Park Zoo which was made possible by the Play 2 Dream Foundation.

Delivering on our mission and inspiring tomorrow’s conservation leaders requires great vision as well as passion, creativity and commitment. We are fortunate to have a skilled and dedicated group of professional staff and a strong core of devoted Board members and volunteers working together to enhance our Zoos. The members of our greatly expanded Board of Directors provide strategic direction, insights, technical expertise, financial resources and untold hours of hard work in a commitment to raising our Zoos to the pinnacle of quality.

We look ahead with a sense of excitement and anticipation. Our Zoos are on the move and the years to come will be marked by transformation and growth that will help us truly realize the vision for these beloved institutions. We are privileged to have the loyal and generous Zoo members, donors and volunteers recognized in this Annual Report who are fueling this initiative. With your continued support, and that of a growing number of partners, we are making it happen!

Sincerely,

John Linehan
President & CEO
A kangaroo joey began to poke its head out of its mother’s pouch in February 2012 at Franklin Park Zoo. The arrival marked the first kangaroo birth at the Zoo since 2005.

Zoos That Inspire

Our Zoos play a unique role in connecting people to the natural world while providing engaging, memorable experiences. At Franklin Park Zoo, visitors watched in pure enchantment along the Outback Trail as Skippy the kangaroo hopped by with her baby in her pouch. At Stone Zoo, guests were thoroughly delighted to watch Paddy, a white-cheeked gibbon, learn to swing and play alongside his parents.

Whether it’s a family outing, a corporate picnic or a school field trip, our Zoos provide a welcoming environment where all guests can enjoy themselves and learn about the incredible animals that we share our planet with. In FY12, we had record-breaking attendance with more than 660,000 visitors who enjoyed everything that our Zoos have to offer. We are working hard to realize our vision for the future of these Zoos and are committed to building world-class institutions for you and your family to enjoy for generations to come.

Significant Animal Achievements

Each animal is an ambassador for its species and has an important story to tell in regard to the importance of wildlife protection and habitat preservation. Some species rely on zoos in part for their comeback from the brink of extinction. Management of animals within and cooperatively between institutions accredited by the Association of Zoos and Aquariums (AZA) is vital for ensuring healthy, genetically diverse populations.

Zoo New England has been an active participant in and contributor to a number of important Species Survival Plans (SSPs) for many years. SSPs, cooperative, inter-zoo programs coordinated nationally through AZA, are designed to maintain genetically diverse and demographically stable captive populations of species.
In FY12, the Zoos experienced quite a baby boom and visitors delighted in seeing all of the new faces.

In early July, red panda twins were born at Franklin Park Zoo, marking the first birth of this endangered species at the Zoo. Born helpless and with closed eyes, the twins, a male and a female, stayed in the nest box with their mother for three months after birth. They caused quite a sensation when they made their exhibit debut in October.

In addition to the red panda twins, other births and hatchings included an endangered Grevy’s zebra, a red kangaroo, and rare Siberian crane chicks.

The kangaroo joey first began to poke its head out of its mother’s pouch in February. Kangaroo babies are born after a very short 30 to 35 day gestation and are about the size of a jelly bean. Joeys begin to emerge from the pouch for short periods at around 190 days. The arrival marked the first kangaroo birth at the Zoo since 2005.

A few months later, a rare Siberian crane chick hatched. Franklin Park Zoo is one of three North American institutions accredited by the Association of Zoos and Aquariums to house these critically endangered birds. It is estimated that roughly 3,000 of these cranes, noted for their pure white plumage and black flight feathers, remain in the wild. The Zoo, the first in North America to successfully breed these birds, has produced seven chicks since 1999.

This success is the result of a lot of hard work and technical expertise. The newest chick, hatched May 15, 2012, at Franklin Park Zoo is a result of artificial insemination. Because these birds hail from the high Arctic regions, each year on February 14 the Zoo staff increases the amount of light in the birds’ exhibit by one hour a week to simulate the light cycle in their native environment. The light is increased until the birds receive 21 to 22 hours of light a day. Once the light cycle reaches this point, the birds typically begin breeding.

At Stone Zoo visitors also saw a number of new faces. New births and hatches included a white-cheeked gibbon, a prehensile-tailed porcupine and Caribbean flamingos.

Since the birth of the white-cheeked gibbon on Sept. 2, 2011, visitors have taken great pleasure in watching Paddy grow from being a small, helpless baby clinging to his mother to the thriving, energetic young gibbon who now swings throughout the exhibit alongside his parents.

Zoo New England participates in the White-checked Gibbon SSP, and this birth – a first for ZNE – is the result of a recommended breeding between Iggy and Kien.
It is one thing to see wildlife, but it’s a completely different experience to be able to interact with the incredible animals at our Zoos.

Visitors of all ages were thrilled with the opportunity to meet Beau at the Giraffe Terrace, a seasonal experience that is available for a small fee. Standing face-to-face with the 18-foot-tall giraffe while feeding him butternut squash, is definitely not something that is soon forgotten.

Masters of Flight: Birds of Prey once again wowed visitors at Stone Zoo. This free-flight show featured bird species from around the world in an engaging, memorable and educational experience. People watched in awe as the birds – including a majestic bald eagle – flew in from overhead and demonstrated natural behaviors such as unique survival techniques and food foraging, as well as specialized physical adaptations.

At Franklin Park Zoo, the ever-engaging Aussie Aviary and Butterfly Landing were once again places where people could truly connect with the wonders of wildlife. Whether feeding the colorful budgies in Aussie Aviary or immersing themselves in the calm, tranquil environment of Butterfly Landing, people of all ages flocked to these interactive and educational spaces.

Visitors were immersed in a prehistoric journey through time at the thrilling Zoorassic Park, where a vast array of fascinating dinosaurs awaited them at every turn. With more than 15 moving, roaring, life-like animatronic dinosaurs, including the imposing Tyrannosaurus rex, this unique seasonal experience at Franklin Park Zoo captivated the imagination.

Through all of these experiences and so many others, Franklin Park Zoo and Stone Zoo are uniquely positioned to connect guests to the vast wonders of nature by creating opportunities to explore, discover, play, learn, imagine and treasure. More than anything else, these experiences help foster a greater appreciation for the natural world that guests will carry with them long after they have walked through our gates.
While our animal collection may be the primary motivation behind a Zoo visit, our mission—our passion—is to inspire and educate the next generation of conservation stewards and leaders. Our conservation programs are far-reaching and make a lasting and meaningful impact locally, regionally and internationally. At our Zoos, people of all ages can discover the incredible biodiversity of our planet and the critical role they play in ensuring it remains a healthy, thriving environment for generations to come.

Looking beyond the majestic lion whose roar echoes throughout Franklin Park Zoo or the snow leopard that tracks her prey from atop her rocky perch at Stone Zoo, you will uncover a host of science and conservation advancements that reverberate into the far corners of the world.

Since 2006, ZNE has been committed to amphibian conservation efforts in Panama. ZNE is one of several institutions working to save amphibians from the brink of extinction in the eastern region of Panama—an area rich with diverse amphibian species. Dr. Eric Baitchman, ZNE Director of Veterinary Services, is the lead veterinarian for the Panama Amphibian Rescue and Conservation Project, comprised of a consortium of partners dedicated to vital amphibian conservation efforts. To learn more about Dr. Baitchman’s work visit www.zoownewengland.org/conservation.

Conservation doesn’t just happen abroad. The Zoos are committed to a host of conservation initiatives right in our own backyard. ZNE, in partnership with Ecologic Entomology, LLC of Boston, has launched a multi-faceted pollinator awareness program. In April 2012, an apiary, featuring 10 wooden bee hives containing 100,000 honeybees, was installed on the grounds of Franklin Park Zoo. Through the apiary project, we plan to teach education program participants, our ZooTeens and others about beekeeping, the role bees play in the ecosystem as pollinators, and the importance of preserving this important species. Further goals include increasing the number of honeybee colonies in the Greater Boston area, and expanding people’s understanding of the inter-reliance of humans with other species of the world.

Also close to home, ZNE staff continues to participate in the restoration of habitat for the endangered Karner blue butterfly. ZNE is part of the New England Zoo & Aquarium Conservation Collaborative, comprised of a group of accredited zoos, which is working to expand the numbers of the Karner blue butterfly through the Karner Blue Butterfly Habitat Restoration Project initiated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and New Hampshire Fish and Game. The project seeks to bolster the local population of this federally endangered butterfly by restoring its pine barren habitat as well as its main food source—wild lupine, in Concord, N.H.
Franklin Park Zoo and Stone Zoo provide the perfect natural environment for active exploration, inquiry and hands-on discovery to inspire people of all ages to interact with the world in a positive way. Zoo New England’s expansive science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) focused educational programs, which incorporate Massachusetts and federal curriculum frameworks, supplement and build interest in formal science education and enable our guests to better explore the intricate connection between natural, thriving habitats and wildlife.

Whether discovering the life cycle of a butterfly in Butterfly Landing or learning about endangered Mexican gray wolves, a visit to the Zoo highlights the importance of wildlife protection and conservation in a meaningful way that has a lasting impact.

Throughout the school year, the Zoos offer free admission to all Massachusetts schoolchildren. By providing opportunities to underserved schoolchildren who may not otherwise be able to visit our Zoos, we are able to share the beauty and complexity of wildlife and extend our reach by bringing fun and effective educational programming to all members of our community. In FY12, we welcomed more than 47,000 students who visited the Zoos during school field trips.

Through a range of formal and informal programming, the Education department shares the wonder of nature with so many – from toddlers in the Playful Paws playgroups to school-aged children, college students working on research, adult education participants and a host of others.
Wonders of the Natural World

“The Franklin Park Zoo is one of Boston's institutional treasures. On the occasion of our Founder's Day, celebrating 368 years of continuous existence, everyone at The Roxbury Latin School ventured to the Zoo, in its 100th year, for a day of education and interesting experiences. I am confident that our students have gained much greater appreciation for their responsibility as stewards of the Earth and all its creatures as a result of our shared adventure. We are very grateful for the professionalism, enthusiasm, and inspiring mission of the Zoo and all those associated with it.”

– Kerry P. Brennan, Headmaster, The Roxbury Latin School

FY12 program highlights:

- Engaged 169,696 visitors through programs and interpretation, a 17 percent increase over FY12
- Increased after-school programming by 80 percent over FY12
- Increased the total number of programs by 11 percent over FY12
- Began the fourth year of a successful summer camp at Stone Zoo
- Presented an increasingly popular set of homeschool programs at both Zoos

Class time is not only for children. Our educators also offer classes aligned with the state’s educational frame-works to enhance the knowledge, skills and expertise of Massachusetts and New Hampshire school teachers. Teachers not only learn how to maximize the use of the Zoos to facilitate learning, but also participate in activities that can be replicated in classrooms using either commonly found materials or special kits designed by the Zoos’ educators.

Zoo New England’s staff also greatly contributes to environmental education beyond the Zoos’ gates. Jennifer Gresham, ZNE Director of Education, is a member of the Steering Committee for the Secretary’s Advisory Group on Energy and Environmental Education (SAGEE) for the state’s Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs and the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

To learn more about ZNE’s Education programs visit www.zoonewengland.org/education.
For more than a decade, Zoo New England’s nationally recognized ZooTeen program has created opportunities and nurtured the development of our future leaders. Since 1999, the summer ZooTeen program at Franklin Park Zoo has provided employment and professional development opportunities for Boston youth. By enriching the program with a structured professional development component, the teens are prepared both for employment at the Zoo, as well as in their future endeavors. The teens not only work in a wide range of Zoo departments, but also forge lasting personal and professional relationships, build their resumes and hone interview skills.

“The program attracts a diverse group of participants from the neighborhoods surrounding Franklin Park Zoo. In FY12, the academic portion of the program was increased to include additional guest speakers on sustainability, conservation, land preservation and invasive species.

Since the program’s inception more than 1,300 Boston youth have been a part of the ZooTeen program. This also includes the Jr. ZooTeen and Teen Ambassador programs which provide mentoring opportunities and unique experiences for highly-motivated young people.

By working at the Zoo, I have learned so much about environmental science and have been given the opportunity to teach others what I know. Not only do I get to learn a lot about the animals but I also am learning about their needs and where they come from. The Zoo has inspired me to share the knowledge I have with others.”

– Christina Scialoia, Teen Ambassador
As a vibrant component of the Boston cultural community and beyond, Zoo New England is committed to community participation and access. In FY12, ZNE was again pleased to partner with the Highland Street Foundation who sponsored two very successful, and highly attended, free days – one at Franklin Park Zoo and one at Stone Zoo. We continue to work with community centers, camps and groups such as the Greater Grove Hall Main Streets, Franklin Park Coalition, Project RIGHT, Boston GreenFest, The Movement Festival, The Boston Youth & Environmental Network, Friends of the Franklin Park Zoo, Emerald Necklace Conservancy, Stoneham Chamber of Commerce, Stoneham Business Roundtable, as well as outreach with libraries, schools, after-school programs and many others.

With help from donations, we partnered with area hospitals and non-profit organizations to present Dreamnight, a special evening for chronically ill and disabled children to enjoy Franklin Park Zoo with their families and caregivers free of charge. More than 1,100 people attended this annual event.

We also facilitated another successful ZooCamp, our 17th year of partnership with Camp Fire USA. Because tuitions are low, this unique children’s summer camp is accessible for many low-income families and the children receive a safe, educational and fun experience.

“Zoo New England plays a unique role in the cultural life of our Commonwealth, both locally through its commitment to its neighborhood and young people, and globally through its commitment to wildlife conservation and preservation.”

– H. Mark Smith, YouthReach Program Manager, Massachusetts Cultural Council

IN KIND DONATIONS

In-kind donations are a unique way to support Zoo New England. These donations can be goods or services, and are used for animal enrichment, educational presentations, administrative purposes and more. In-kind donations help defray Zoo costs and provide a great way to put your unwanted goods or skilled services to use.

Please contact the Development department at 617-989-2012 to make a donation or for more information. In-kind donations are tax deductible as allowable by law.
GRACE FEY DONATIONS

For many years, Grace Fey has been an unwavering champion of Zoo New England and its zoos – Franklin Park Zoo and Stone Zoo. As Chair of the Board, she provided steadfast leadership and exceptional vision. Gifts made below established the Grace K. Fey Fund for Zoo New England. Reflecting Grace’s personal focus and support, the Fund directly supports Zoo New England’s goal to transform into two of the country’s major zoos.

When Peter Fuller passed away in May 2012, our Zoo lost a dear friend and a staunch supporter. Mr. Fuller was a driving force behind the success of our gorilla program, in addition to making it possible to bring black rhinos, orangutans and other important species to the Zoo. Gifts made in Mr. Fuller’s memory were designated to support the care and enrichment of the gorillas at Franklin Park Zoo.

The Alfred Huang North American Crane Exhibit serves an educational purpose to teach the public about the conservation efforts being made to bring the whooping crane back from the brink of extinction, and tell the story about the sandhill crane, another great North American species.

The memory of Alfred and his ability to inspire those around him lives on at Stone Zoo, a place he loved very much. Every contribution, big or small, has helped us create a legacy in Alfred’s name that will pay tribute to the kind and generous person who was loved by all who knew him.

In April 2006, Franklin Park Zoo lost a cherished family member when former Zookeeper Jonathan Gilmour passed away suddenly at age 29. To honor Jonathan and his commitment to the welfare of animals, the Jonathan Gilmour Memorial Scholarship Fund was established in his memory. The fund was established by Zoo New England with the generous financial support and volunteer leadership from the Gilmour family.

Award winners are ZNE staff members who have been employed by the Zoo for at least one year.

Each May, the Jonathan Gilmour Memorial Scholarship Bike Ride is held in Hollis, N.H. Hundreds of riders celebrate Jonathan’s memory and through the years this Ride has raised tens of thousands of dollars to support the scholarship fund.
TRIBUTES

A gift to Zoo New England is an excellent way to recognize someone special to you. Gifts in honor or in memory allow you an opportunity to celebrate an animal loving friend or family member in a truly meaningful way. Unless otherwise specified, these gifts aid the Annual Fund. The person or family recognized by the donation receives a special notification from the Zoo.
